JAMES STOUT FAMILY

THE following record supplements the brief information on James Stout's family which is given in Stillwell's Historical & Genealogical Miscellany 4:337. It also corrects an assumption made in Stout and Allied Families (1951), page 35; namely that this James and James Stout, "the Turler," were identical.

Oddly enough, the record gives marriage dates but does not name the spouse. Death records are also lacking, but reference to NJA 41:362 indicates that James Stout died in 1810. All entries in the Bible up to that of Julian Bryant are made in the same handwriting and ink, pointing to transcription from an older record during or after 1803. The births of the four Servis children appear to have been entered at a single later date; followed still later by the entry of death records for James S.

Servis and Elizabeth (Stout) Hoagland.

James Stout (David,³ Jonathan,² Richard¹) married Catherine, daughter of John Stout (James,³ David,² Richard¹) and Rachel Merrill. The reference in the Bible to Rachel Stout, born 1715, probably indicates Rachel (Merrill) Stout.

The James Stout Bible is in the possession of Mrs. Howard G. Stout, Ringoes, N. J. The Old Testament title-page is missing, but the one for the New Testament bears the imprint: "TRENTON: Printed and Sold by Isaac Collins./M.DCC. XCI." The entry, "C. E. Stout, Feb. 17th 1883," is written on the page facing the New Testament title-page A concordance at the back of the Bible bears date M.DCC.XC.

first start through his liberality and assistance. He took great interest in local military affairs, and was a captain in the militia of his day. He was a Whig in politics, and a strong pillar in the Clove Presbyterian Church. In his latter days he was actively interested in the temperance cause. He passed away on Sept. 9, 1846, dividing his property equitably among his children, who still own a large portion of the original estate.

Capt. Cooper was married on Dec. 25, 1811, to Sarah, daughter of Henry and Sarah (Rosencrans) Dodge, of Dutchess Co., N. Y., and a member of the influential family of that name, in New York City. Her father, Henry Dodge, was once a representative in the New York Legislature, and many of her relatives performed active service in the Revolutionary war. Mrs. Cooper was born May 4, 1790, and died on June 12, 1872. Her children were as follows: Matthew H., born Oct. 25, 1812, residing in Brooklyn, N. Y.; John J., born April 9, 1814, residing at Goshen, N. Y.; William, born Sept. 16, 1815, graduated at Princeton College, practiced law at Deckertown, died March 3, 1842; Sarah M., born April 30, 1817, married Asa Smith, of Wantage, Sept. 30, 1835; James H., born Feb. 21, 1819, died Nov. 19, 1876; Charles A., born Jan. 2, 1821, graduated at the University of New York, practiced medicine for twenty-two years in Wantage township, now a leading oil operator at Oil City, Pa.; Hannah E., born Jan. 23, 1823, deceased, wife of W. W. Rose, of Brooklyn; Mahlon, born June 26, 1824, residing at Warwick; Walter, born Sept. 28, 1828, died Aug. 14, 1830; and Daniel W., born March 7, 1831, a practicing physician of Wantage township.

EVI DE WITT.

Among the many old families who, about the middle of the seventeenth century, sought the shores of the New World, none had been more distinguished in political and social life, none had numbered in its ranks more noted men than the De Witts.

Natives of Dordrecht, one of the oldest burgher towns of Holland, and in later years dear to art as the birthplace of Cuyper and Ary Scheffer, and to theology as the meeting-place of the Synod of Dort, the "Geschlachten von Dordrecht," in the Royal Library at the Hague, gives the descent of the De Witt family in an unbroken line from the year 1295 to Sept. 8, 1639. Some of the names served under William the Silent, and were zealous supporters of the revolted provinces against Spanish oppression. After the death of John of Barneveldt, Jacob De Witt succeeded to the high honors of "Land Advocate of Holland." His son Cornelius, the burgomaster of Dordrecht, "at the head of a Dutch fleet, with a stout Dutch admiral to do his bidding," sailed up the Thames, burning the English ships and sending consternation into the very heart of London. Another son, John De Witt, one of the most distinguished men in the history of the Netherlands, became Grand Pensionary of Holland during the period between the separation from Spain and the opening of the Thirty Years' War.

The family emigration to the colony of "New Amsterdam" began about the year 1639. Andries and Tjerck Claus De Witt located at Esopus, in Ulster Co., N. Y., about 1648, and became the progenitors of the Ulster branch of the family. As the generations increased the family became numerous, and some of its representatives followed the line of settlement through the Mamakating and Minisink regions, and have since been numerous represented in that section.

Moses De Witt, son of Jacob and Leah De Witt, and father of our subject, was born Oct. 23, 1761. He served in the war at Minisink, where he held the office of captain, and is said to have stood his ground against the Indians, and to have fought bravely until a white man was no longer to be seen. After the struggle he located in Wantage township, Sussex Co., near the Jacob W. De Witt farm, where he passed his days as a farmer, being one of the pioneers of Wantage. To himself and wife, Margaret, were born the following children,—namely, Hiram, born Nov. 9, 1783; Olivia, born Jan. 7, 1785, married Amos Titsworth, of Wantage; Jezereel, born Sept. 1, 1786; Tjerck, born April 19, 1788; Evi, born June 11, 1789; Moses, born Sept. 1, 1790; Mary, born April 20, 1792; Aaron, born June 24, 1793; Elizabeth, born Jan. 20, 1796, married Edward Lewis; Margaret, born Oct. 13, 1797, married Samuel Smith; John, born Jan. 18, 1799; Naomi, born March 23, 1801, married John B. Decker; Jacob W., born Nov. 27, 1804; and Catharine, born March 23, 1806, married Jacob Swarts. Of this large family of children, all attained mature years save Hiram, who was killed in early life by the falling of a tree. Olivia, Evi, Moses, Elizabeth, and Jacob W. became residents of Wantage. Jacob, Soferine, and Samuel were brothers of the first Moses. The first two passed their lives in Wantage township, and Samuel removed West. Moses De Witt died Dec. 8, 1842, and his wife on May 19, 1845.

Evi De Witt, the subject of this sketch, is one of the oldest residents of Sussex County, being in his ninety-second year. He was born June 11, 1789, in Wantage township, grew up on his father's farm, and at the age of seventeen went to learn the trade of a tanner and currier with John Peckham, of Greenville, Orange Co., N. Y. He worked as an apprentice for two years, and was taken in as a joint partner the third year. On March 9, 1811, he married Prudence Stoddard, a native of Connecticut, who was born Nov. 6, 1791. After this event he continued to work at his trade for some time, when he removed to his native township and engaged in tanning and carrying on the farm where his son, Jonathan S. De Witt, now lives. Here his family was born and raised, the two avocations of farming and tanning being separately pursued. Upon the marriage of his son, Jonathan S., Mr. De Witt purchased the Tjereck De Witt farm, whereon he erected his present residence, about twenty-eight years ago. He subsequently resided for a few years where Jacob W. De Witt now lives.

The life of Mr. De Witt has been a modest and busy one, spent within the inner circles of society, yet having an important relation to the growth and development of the community in which he has passed so many years. He enjoys the respect and confidence of his friends for his honest, straightforward, and manly life, and will carry down with him, at a green old age, the recollection of a sincere, earnest, and useful career. He is a Democrat in politics, and has filled the leading offices of his township, though never a seeker after place. He is a member of the Wantage Methodist Episcopal Church, and a liberal contributor to church and kindred interests. His wife died Aug. 25, 1873. Of a large family of children eight are still living, and his grandchildren number twenty-four. The children were Lucy S., born Feb. 9, 1812, who resides in Wantage, and married John L. Decker and Obadiah A. Wright; Jezereel, born Sept. 16, 1813, died Aug. 24, 1821; Hannah, born Oct. 11, 1815, wife of Halsey Kite; Simeon S., born Dec. 21, 1817, and Lorenzo, born Feb. 20, 1820, both of whom died Aug. 21, 1821; Prudence, born Sept. 3, 1822, married Benjamin Vanetten; Jonathan S., born May 31, 1825, a leading farmer of Wantage; Lucretia, born July 23, 1827, died Feb. 9, 1846; Arminda L., born Dec. 1, 1829, wife of Nathaniel W. Bailey; Daniel S., born Feb. 23, 1832; Nelson, born April 9, 1834, residing on the home farm; and Margaret L., born Aug. 19, 1836, wife of Abraham J. Decker, of Wantage.

JACOB W. DE WITT.

Jacob W. De Witt, son of Moses and Margaret De Witt, was born on the homestead of his father, in Wantage township, on Nov. 27, 1804. He came of distinguished Dutch stock in Holland, and the family of which he is a representative has long been identified with the settlement and development of the section of country in which he lives. The earlier history of his ancestors is presented in connection with the sketch of his older brother, Evi De Witt, in this work.

Until the death of his parents the life of Mr. De Witt was passed on the old homestead, which he farmed on shares a portion of the time. His education was obtained at the district school which stood on the corner, near his present residence, on the "Clove" road. On Feb. 3, 1830, he was united in marriage to Phebe, daughter of Constant and Lydia A. Fuller, of Wantage. She was born April 10, 1810, and died Sept. 4, 1857. After the demise of his father the home farm came to Mr. De Witt, upon which he lived, engaged in agricultural pursuits, until his removal to his present residence, in 1873, and which he still owns. He is recognized as one of the successful leading representative agriculturists of Wantage, and by a life of industry, integrity, and fair dealing has accumulated a good estate and won the respect and confidence of many friends. He is a man of generous impulses, liberal in his support of the religious and benevolent institutions of his day, and for thirty years past has been an elder in the First Presbyterian Church of Wantage. He was formerly a Democrat in politics, but now identified with the Republican party, and has filled the office of freeholder, and the minor offices of the township, as the representative of each party. He took an active interest in the project of bringing the Midland Railroad to Deckertown, to which he contributed two thousand dollars, and is one of the well-preserved, intelligent, and popular aged men of his section. His children by his first marriage were as follows: Lydia A., born Dec. 30, 1830; Constant F., born March 29, 1833, died May 27, 1867; Miranda L., born Feb. 22, 1835, married Alfred Hardin, died Jan. 8, 1876; Theodore, born July 9, 1837, a leading farmer in Wantage; Sarah Naomi, born July 31, 1841; Emma A., born Dec. 5, 1843, died May 20, 1852; Margaret, born June 14, 1846, widow of Dr. Lewis Westfall; Moses, born April 30, 1849, a graduate of Princeton College in 1870, and a practicing lawyer at Newark, N. J.; and an infant son, who died unnamed. His second wife was Fanny, daughter of Henry and Sarah Shepherd, of Wantage, and widow of Silas Lewis, of the same place. She was born March 24, 1814, and is the present helpmeet of his home.

CHARLES A. WILSON.

The Wilson family is of Scotch extraction, and has been identified from the earliest years with the settlement and development of Wantage and contiguous townships in Sussex County.

Andrew Wilson, the pioneer of that branch of the family to which the subject of this sketch belongs, was born in Scotland, on Nov. 30, 1726, and emigrated to this country from Ireland in early life. He was of good family and a commissioned officer under George III., serving at the battle of Ticonderoga during the French and Indian war. He was badly wounded in the service, and granted a patent of land by the government. He first located in Wantage township, near the Wallkill River, and finally established himself where his grandson now resides, and where he passed his life in clearing up land, tilling the soil, and in the usual farming operations incident to a pioneer life. Himself and wife, Martha Ferguson, were among the six who formed the first Methodist class in this section of Sussex County. She was born on March 5, 1731, and the marriage occurred on Aug. 29, 1750. tract of land $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles southeast of the village, where he pursued his vocation, and also became a tiller of the soil. He was the grandfather of George Shepherd, the present occupant of the homestead, which was erected in 1806 and occupied for years by Henry, father of the latter gentleman. The children of Henry are Jesse, George, Fanny, Lavinia, Lydia Ann, and Mary. The latter two reside at Unionville.

Petrus Swarts was of Holland lineage, and settled in Ulster Co., N. Y., near Kingston, where he died in 1735, leaving five sons and six daughters. One of the sons, Baltus by name, came to Sussex County about 1780, and engaged in farming pursuits, which were followed until his death. Of his large family of children, Jacob Swarts was the eldest. He resided during his lifetime in Montague, where his death occurred in 1879.

William Mott came from Monmouth Co., N. J., in 1755, and, having purchased a tract of land, erected a log cabin. He was an industrious and successful farmer and a skillful hunter and trapper. Mr. Mott had two daughters, whose children, together with an adopted son, inherited the property which was afterwards purchased by Simeon McCoy.

The Cooke family, though not among the oldest settlers in Wantage, merit, from their prominence, a word in this history. Rev. Sylvester Cooke was born in Massachusetts, Aug. 25, 1799, was graduated at Amherst College, and ordained to the ministry in 1829. In 1848 he received a call to the Clove Church, where he remained until 1871, when increasing infirmities rendered his retirement necessary after a pastorate of twenty-eight years.

Mr. Cooke had five sons, all of whom entered the service of the government during the war, and two of whom are buried in the cemetery of the Clove Church. Frederick A. died in the service, June 12, 1864, at the age of twenty-six, while an officer of the Second New Jersey Cavalry. Edwin F. rose to the rank of colonel and brevet brigadier-general, and died at Santiago, Chili, Aug. 6, 1867, while secretary of the United States legation under Gen. Kilpatrick, from disease contracted while confined a prisoner in Libby Prison; he was thirty-two years of age.

Rev. Sylvanus Cooke was one of the respected citizens of Wantage who have left their mark upon the religious, moral, and educational interests of the township.

IV.—SCHOOLS.

Little information is obtainable regarding the earliest schools opened in the township. That portion of the population who were able to incur the attendant expense educated their sons and daughters at the popular classical and boarding schools of the day. The common schools of the township were not of a high grade, and comparatively little was done at an early day to foster education.

The most widely known of the public schools of the township was that opened in the Pond schoolhouse. Many of the children within a radius of several miles received their first lessons here, under the dictation of one Master Gunn. Another school building was located on the site of the present hotel of Benjamin Smith, at Deckertown. It was 20 by 24 feet in dimensions, and was also taught by Master Gunn, or "the old Gunn who shot the boys every time," as he was facetiously described by the scholars. His terms were $1 per scholar for a period of three months. He was followed by Masters Hammill, Wheeler, and Loomis.

At this time the school-houses in some localities of the township were built of logs, though that known as the union school-house, near the Wantage Methodist Episcopal church, was more pretentious in its construction.

WILLIAM RANKIN'S SCHOOL.

In 1833, William Rankin, having realized the lack of opportunities for education in the township, determined to open a select school at Deckertown. So little interest was felt in the enterprise that he with difficulty obtained a room 14 feet square for the purpose. This he rented, and began his first term with a single scholar,—Mr. John A. Whitaker, still a resident of Deckertown.

Mr. Rankin was esteemed as a classical instructor, but the undertaking was regarded by the community as an impracticable one. The school continued for some time with but a single pupil, though the number gradually increased, until the ensuing spring it numbered twenty scholars. From this small beginning it grew to be a power for good, and with its success dawned a new era in educational matters in Sussex County. At the end of ten years over a thousand pupils had sat under his instruction.

Mr. Rankin subsequently taught in Amity, N. Y., after which he removed to Morris County. His later efforts were at Mendham, in that county, where the school he established enjoyed a prosperity fully equal to that of former years.

The school familiarly known as Mount Retirement Seminary was established by Edward A. Stiles, whose parents removed from Morris County to Vernon when he was but two years of age. During 1819 they located upon a farm in Wantage, on which their son spent the greater portion of his life as principal of the seminary above named. This school arose from the humblest beginnings. In 1833 half a dozen boys were instructed in a room of the farmhouse, and made such decided progress as to have very soon established the character of Mr. Stiles as a successful teacher. The school soon increased to a size and reputation far beyond his early hopes. For many years it enjoyed an average patronage of seventy-five pupils, and the enterprise was in full vigor when its control was relinquished, in 1865. The graduates of this seminary are to be found in every part of the coun-
