KONRAD OSANNER

Konrad (Kunz) Osanner, the first Osiander on record, was born about 1410. He was a resident and Steuerer in the cloister at Wassertrüdingen on the Wörnitz in Mittelfranken. Whom he married and when he died are not known. His only child known to us was a son, Andreas. (Some records give the Osanner-Osiander surname as Hosemann).

ANDREAS OSANNER OF GUNZENHAUSEN

Andreas Osanner was born 1443/44 in Auhausen and died after 1524 in a home for old people in Nuremberg at 82 years of age. He was a blacksmith, and a counsellor and citizen of Gunzenhausen. He married Anna Herzog sometime before 1498. Anna was born in 1458 and died in 1540 in Nuremberg. They had two known children, both born in Gunzenhausen:

- * 1) Andreas, b. 19 DEC 1498.
- 2) Margarète (only mentioned in one of her brother's letters).

ANDREAS OSIANDER, PREACHER AND THEOLOGIAN

Andreas Osiander, son of Andreas and Anna (Herzog) Osanner, was born 19 DEC 1498 and died in Königsberg, Prussia 17 OCT 1552. The next section will be devoted to the career of this prominent 16th century theologian who is known as the reformer of Nuremberg.

Andreas was married three times and had a total of seven children. He first married Katharina Preu (Praun) 2 NOV 1525 in St. Lorenz (Lawrence) Church in Nuremberg. The second wife of Andreas Osiander was Helena _____, b. 18 SEP 1517. Andreas and Helena were married in St. Lorenz Church, Nuremberg. Helena, kin to the Künhofer family, died in Nuremberg JUN 1545 in childbirth. There were no children from this second marriage.

The third wife of Andreas Osiander was Helena von Magenbuch. They were married in St. Sebald Church in Nuremberg 26 AUG 1545. Helena was born same place in 1523 and died in Hohenacker (Waiblingen district) 8 SEP 1597. She was a botanist and hobbyist in alchemy. From 1584 to 1596 (well after her husband's death) Helena was court apothecary at Stuttgart. She was the daughter of Johann von Magenbuch, doctor of medicine (Stadtphysikus und Kreis-Leibmedikus) at Nuremberg. Helena's mother was Prisca Hunnia von Schweinitz. Prisca married a second time, to Johannes Rucker, in Königsberg in 1556. Johannes was born 1526 in Nuremberg and died in Denkendorf (Esslingen district) 6 DEC 1579. In 1578 he was provost there. He had left Königsberg on account of the Osiandrian Controversy. In 1558 he was pastor at Pfaffenhofen (Heilbronn district). Johannes was in 1560 dean at Kirchheim unter Teck.

There were two children born of Andreas Osiander's third marriage. They were:

In 1581 he was preacher and in 1587 senior minister at Buchsweiler.

Andreas Osiander had a niece named Anna*, presumably the daughter of his sister Margarete. Anna entered the pages of history by becoming the German Lutheran wife (in 1532) of Thomas Cranmer, the first Protestant archbishop of Canterbury. Thomas Cranmer was born at Aslacten, England 2 JUL 1489, and was burnt at the stake by the Catholic Queen Mary 21 MAR 1557. Some of his posts were court chaplain and advisor to King Henry VIII of England, archdeacon of Taunton, and prelate of London. See the Andreas Osiander historical section below.

* possibly Margaret.

Lukas Osiander, father of Andreas Osiander the Younger, was born in Nuremberg on 16 DEC 1534. He attended school in Nuremberg and Königsberg and entered Tübingen University 13 APR 1553. He was recipient of the doctor of theology degree. In 1555 Lukas was head deacon at Göppingen, in 1557 pastor, then dean at Blaubeuren (Ulm district), and from 1562 to 1594 court chaplain, superintendent, and counsellor of the consistory at Stuttgart. From 1594 to 1596 he was preacher at the Stuttgart collegiate church, and from 1596 to 1598 prelate and Landschaftsassessor at Adelberg. On account of his candor he was held in disfavor for a time (about 1598) by Duke Frederick. From 1598 to 1603 Lukas was head preacher at Esslingen. He received the imperial coat of arms on 29 NOV 1591. He died in Esslingen 17 SEP 1604 and is buried at the Stuttgart collegiate church.

Lukas Osiander was present, in 1564, at the Maulbronn Colloquy and was one of the composers of the Maulbronn Formula. He took part in the Mompelgard Colloquy with Theodore Beza in 1586. Lukas corresponded with Jeremias II, Patriarch of Constantinople, in an effort to establish a dialogue between the Lutheran and Eastern Orthodox churches. His most important works are his BAUERNPOSTILLE (Farmer's Postil), his BIBLE WORK, and OUTLINE OF THE MAGDEBURG CENTURIES.

Lukas Osiander was married twice. In 1555 he wed Margarete Entringer. Margarete was born in Tübingen JUN 1524 and died in Stuttgart 16 JAN 1566. Soon after Margarete's death Lukas married Tabitha Engel at Waldenbuch (Böblingen district) on 15 MAY 1566. Tabitha was born in Oberstenfeld (Ludwigsburg district) 25 DEC 1539 and died in Tübingen 22 MAR 1625. She was the daughter of Veit Engel and wife Elisabeth Sigel.
