pp. 9 and 10:

p. 12: "One early morning Charleston was alarmed by a horse man without hat or coat clattering through the streets to the Sheriff. This man, JOHN PEEPLES (supposed to be a Georgian), having put up at the Six-Mile House, had been awakened by voices of John and Lavinia Fisher, and a crack in the wall enabled him to see them busy over his wallet and his money. The woman said he had a good horse and perhaps other valuables, and in spite of the man's reluctance said she "must attend to him at breakfast." Peeples felt sure of poison and at dawn managed to get to his horse.

The Sheriff's deputy, Col. Cleary, at the head of a squad, managed to surround the Six-Mile House without attracting attention. The Fishers were captured, and with them four other members of their band. This was accomplished on Saturday, Feb. 13, 1819. Muskets, pistols, knives, and powder were found. A stolen cow was found butchered in an outhouse. Col. Cleary removed his prisoners and left a Mr. Ross in charge, who was attacked by the uncaptured members of the robber band and almost murdered, barely escaping to the woods. That night the house and outbuildings were burned to the ground. The Sheriff raided the Five-Mile House but upon arresting several men suspected of belonging to the gang found nothing definite against them. But the proprietor was forced to destroy the house.

The Fishers in jail were positively identified by JOHN PEEPLES. The attractive young woman was especially upset.

When Judge Bay opened court on March 23, 1819, the Fishers and most of their companions were returned to jail. Soon after one of the many searches found a grave, which being officially opened, contained the body of a man in a rough box, and that of a woman, covered with brush, both unknown.

At the June term of court the couple were convicted but demanded a new trial. While this was under consideration some brave and curious people opened the Six-Mile House cellar, which had been hidden by the ruins. This cellar was beneath the former dining room and was full of human bones. The inference was a trapdoor under the table, conveniently situated to receive the travellers who had taken the poison from which PEEPLES had escaped.

On Monday, Sept. 13, John Fisher and one of his mates, Robert, slid down a rope from the jail window and escaped. Lavinia could not accomplish this as the rope broke too soon, but they promised to come back for her.

In the offer of a reward of $500 made by Gov. Geddes proclamation, Fisher was described as "about 6 ft. high, slim made, knock-kneed, fair complexioned, dark hair, and eyes, and about 30 years of age." The two men were recaptured the next night soon after eleven. They bought food from Mr. Bull, a grocer on South Bay, and were so hurried that he grew suspicious, and followed them, saw them hide under a boat at Williams wharf. They were promptly caught and searching showed them supplied with gold, and a number of watches. They were going to release Mrs. Fisher and take a schooner for Matanzas.

On Jan. 18, 1830, they were again brought to trial before either Judge Salcock or Judge Bay. Their execution was fixed for Friday, Feb. 4, but deferred to Friday, Feb. 18, that they might be brought to repentance. Among the devout men and women who visited them, Miss Barnes mentioned etc. Fisher seemed penitent, but Lavinia jeered. ~~xxxxxxx~~

Dr. Furman, pastor of the First Baptist Church ... drove to the gallows with them, and took Fisher's last message. Until she was actually taken from her cell Lavinia asserted she would not die. Her ravings were terrible and her husband's efforts to soothe her and point her to repentance were most touching. They were both dressed in white, and the carriage ~~xxxxxxx~~ in which they sat with Dr. Furman was closely guarded from the immense crowd. On the gallows Lavinia shrieked in spite of her husband's efforts. Another minister, Mr. Galluchat, approached her. She said clearly: "Cease! I will have none of it. Save your words for others that want them. But if you have a message you want to send to hell, give it to me: I will carry it." At this minute a paper in the sheriff's hand renewed her hope of a reprieve. But he told her she must die. And then the poor woman prayed to Heaven for mercy on her soul. "

p. 8 of the same book, "A Day on the Cooper River":

"About 25 years ago (before 1832) Miss Annie M. Barnes, an author and a South Carolinian, living at the time in Summerville, searched closely the file of old Charleston papers, the court records, and other documents, and drew upon the memory of an older member of the family who had much of it from an eye and ear witness, and so prepared a very full account of the terrible tragedy at the Six-Mile House in 1819. Tradition, which is not to be disregarded entirely, but is strangely obtuse in her relations to her step-father, history, transferred this awful scene to the innocent Four-Mile House over a century ago. Many however, among them Dr. Gabriel Manigault, never confused the facts.

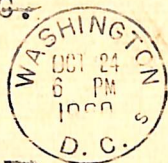

The heart and home of the "Six-Mile-House" in 1819 were a young couple, John Fisher and Lavinia, his wife. They were on the main route of travel by the mail coach from Charleston to the North, or into the city from all the country about. Highwaymen were a danger to travellers alone or after night-fall, and many took refuge there or at the Five-Mile-House near the town.

In the fall and winter of 1818 there had been numerous robberies along the mail line, and murder with some of the robberies. But some travellers vanished mysteriously, never reaching their destinations. Official and private inquiries were set on foot without success, except that the territory around the Five- and Six-Mile posts seemed most dangerous. "

Dear Bob:

Received the Jesse Williamson data in time to hold back dscts. of John I was about to mail. Will revamp. Mr. Sandiford flew to Charleston, explored around Hampton, etc. Jesse has a tombstone, d. 1813, no date b. Lillian has been in hosp. 2 yrs. Had dinner with him last night downtown. Goes home tonight, will write you.

We went across st. to P.O., your letter of 10/19 in my box. He read it to me. Yes, spaces help. We all agree 1786 for Jesse. Will work your last data, retype before mailing you and him. My life is spent re-typing! But it is wonderful to have it right. When I "get out of S.C." the typing of book will go fast, I hope. You've been wonderful! Love to you and Cora.

Lillian told him trouble was mental.

Proclamation

PVT. CHARLES DAVANT (1750-1781)

WHEREAS, Charles Davant (1750-1781) served as Pvt. Charles Davant under the Patriot S. C. Militia Patrol (on Hilton Head Island) during the American Revolution; and

WHEREAS, Pvt. Charles Davant, a staunch Whig (Patriot S. C. Militia), was ambushed on October 22, 1781, near Zion Chapel of Ease Cemetery, by a raiding party of Tories from Daufuskie Island (Captain Martinangel's Royal Militia); and

WHEREAS, Pvt. Charles Davant was the only S. C. Militia soldier killed in action on Hilton Head during the Revolutionary War; and

WHEREAS, Pvt. Charles Davant was buried on Hilton Head Island at the Zion Chapel of Ease Cemetery and a bronze marker with his name, dates of birth and death, and the circumstances of his ambush will be erected at his grave site; and

WHEREAS, above all, Pvt. Charles Davant was an heroic gentleman who sacrificed his life in the cause of freedom and independence, by patrolling Hilton Head Island against possible British and Tory Raids; and

WHEREAS, October 22, 1996, is the 215th anniversary of Pvt. Charles Davant's death.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Thomas D. Peebles, Mayor of the Town of Hilton Head Island, on behalf of the Town Council, hereby proclaim October 22, 1996, as Pvt. Charles Davant Day on Hilton Head Island in recognition of Pvt. Charles Davant's sacrifice of his life for the cause of freedom and independence.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I hereunto set my hand and caused this seal of the Town of Hilton Head Island to be affixed this 15th day of October, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-six.
