BELOVED TEACHER, FORMER ROMAN, DIES IN NEW YORK

News Of "Miss Clara" Rhodes' Death Saturday Brings Grief To Many Former Pupils

Miss Clara Rhodes is dead. She died very suddenly Saturday morning, in New York.

"Miss Clara," as she was known and loved by thousands of her former pupils and friends, was a teacher in the Rome city schools for many years. Through her wise counsel and efficient instructions, she made her influence a decided factor in educational circles, not alone in Rome, but throughout the entire south.

Clara Rhodes was the daughter of J. Henry and Mary Cooley Rhodes, pioneer residents of Rome. Relative of Col. Alfred Shorter, she was graduated from Shorter college. After leaving the city schools here, she attended Columbia university, where she received here master's degree. Then followed a series of connections, which resulted in a succession of honors. At one time connected with Coker college in South Carolina, and dean of several institutions, she was recalled to Columbia, where she held a chair until three years ago. She was then called to China, where she held a chair in English for two years. Offered the department of English in Kobe college, Kobe, Japan, she worked there until six months ago, when she returned to New York.

She was oldest of three children, a brother, Herbert Rhodes preceded her in death by several years; and she is survived by a sister, Mrs. Lewis Smith, of Attleboro, Mass. Mrs. P. B. Brown, Rome, is a cousin as also is Julius Cooley, Chatillon village. A niece, Miss Mary Cooley Smith, is at Shorter college.

The funeral will be held today from the residence of Mrs. Smith, at Attleboro, Mass.

J. H. RHODES DIES AT HOME OF DAUGHTER

WELL-KNOWN ROMAN STRICKEN WITH HEART FAILURE EARLY SUNDAY.

Mr. J. H. Rhodes died early Sunday morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Lewis R. Smith, in Bluffton, Ala., and the sad intelligence of his demise came as a great shock to his many Rome friends.

Mr. Rhodes had been a prominent figure in business circles of Rome for many years. He was connected with the Morrison-Trammell Brick company at one time and had headed the Etowah Vehicle company and other commercial concerns.

The deceased was about 65 years of age and moved here a number of years ago from South Carolina. He had been in ill health for some time and went to Bluffton in the hope that the change might prove beneficial. By his gentlemanly bearing and pleasant manners, he made many friends. His death came unexpectedly, the immediate cause being heart failure.

The funeral took place Monday afternoon from the residence of Mr. Smith at Bluffton, the services being conducted by Dr. R. B. Headden. Among those who attended the funeral from here were Mrs. Eben Hillier and Mrs. Ethel Hillier Harris.

SAVANNAH EVENING PRESS

Typical Scene in Savannah Homes Today

—Evening Press Photo, Developed by Photocraft

The above scene was re-enacted in thousands of homes in Savannah today as Uncle Sam's 92 enumerators started the decennial quiz. Miss Dorothy Cornell (left), one of the enumerators, is shown making her first call. Answering the questions is Mrs. Effie Morrison, 117 Thirty-fourth street, east.

CENSUS IS OFF TO GOOD START TODAY

ENUMERATORS REPORT CO-OPERATION IN SAVANNAH HOMES

Enumerators who began the 1940 federal population and housing census today in Savannah and Chatham county reported satisfactory progress and splendid co-operation to Mrs. Nola M. Roos, supervisor. A check-up this afternoon showed some enumerators were averaging 12 names an hour.

Group meetings will be called at bureau headquarters in the Realty Building for general discussions after the census gets well under way, and the decennial counting will doubtlessly be expedited. The population and housing census will last 15 days, while 30 days will be allowed for finding out facts about farms in the county.

Since there is no set salary for enumerators, only estimate can be made of the amount of money they will make while in government employ. Washington headquarters estimate the average, energetic enumerator should make $4 or $5 a day.

Without exception the enumerators, most of them women, are assigned to districts away from their own immediate neighborhoods, Mrs. Roos reports.

The supervisor said every enumerator who made a preliminary report during the day said no one had shown hesitancy in answering questions, and that only co-operation had been found in any home.

Even more than co-operation was found in some homes. That was hospitality. Several census takers were asked in for "a bite of breakfast or a cup of coffee."

The first day's enumeration was not without its humorous incidents. One woman interviewed, for instance, had to change some of her answers when she suddenly declared to the interviewer:

"Oh, I forgot about my husband!"

In one case a husband had to run down a street to overtake an enumerator to get his financial report straightened. He just happened to come home as the enumerator left, and was told by his wife that his yearly earnings had been specified at $8,000. He caught the enumerator to explain $8,000 was the amount his business made, not the amount of his salary.

"All in all," Mrs. Roos said after the first day's work, "the enumerators reflect a pleasant task. We are very happy, of course, over this fine spirit of co-operation."
